COUNTY TIPPERARY

SECTION A: BARONY OF LOWER ORMOND
VOLUME 12: PARISH OF TERRYGLASS

Compiled by Denise Foulkes

The Ormond Historical Society, 1985.

TERRYGLASS GRAVEYARDS

Terryglass was the site of one of the most famous Irish monasteries in the early centuries of Irish Christianity. It was founded by St. Colm MacCremthainn who died in 549. The monastery was burnt down in 806, in 845 and lastly in 1164, when it was not rebuilt being replaced by a simple parish church of the Diocese of Killaloe. To day nothing remains of the monastic buildings.

The castle at Old Court, Terryglass was built by John Marshall in the first decade of the 13th century

The old graveyard on the southern outskirts of the town is in very good condition. It contains a small C. of I. church building which was recently sold for other purposes.

There are over 200 headstones all of which have been copied. The oldest is a memorial to one Thomas Cleary 1741 and there are many dating from the middle and late 1700 s and early 1800 s.

In compiling the list of names in alphabetical order, the name Kilfoil was inadvertently left out. There should have been a cross reference to Elloner Phelan.

Where it has proved impossible to decipher part of an inscription it is recorded thus----. Where there is some doubt about a word, usually a date, it is recorded thus ?1830 ? 1850.

There is a beautiful modern Catholic Church on the northern end of the town with a very large adjoining graveyard. The history of this church is recorded on a plaque on the outside wall, this has been copied with the headstones which record the co-founders of this handsome church and the memorials of a number of priests of the Terryglass parish, some of whom have been reinterred in this graveyard.

All the rest of the headstones, being modern and uniform in size and basic inscription have not been copied.

Denise Foulkes.
