COUNTY TIPPERARY

SECTION B: BARONY OF UPPER ORMOND

VOLUME 10: PARISH OF NENAGH

(a) Tyone graveyard

(b) Workhouse graveyard

(c) St John the Baptist Church

Compiled by Rosarie Mullane and Denise Foulkes

Ormond Historical Society 1989

INTRODUCTION

Tyone graveyard lies in the civil parish of Nenagh in the barony of Upper Ormond - part of the parish is also in Lower Ormond. It is one of three burial grounds in the parish, the others being in Kenyon Street (published in 1982) and the Franciscan Friary (to come).

The graveyard, which is nearly an acre in extent, is in the grounds of what was once an extensive 13th century Augustinian Monastery and of which a good portion of its church still stands.

There are few enough inscribed gravestones in the church ruin itself. The oldest inscribed stone in the grounds found is that to a Thomas Cunningham 'who was and upright man' and who died in 1814. The next oldest is dated 1827 and commemorates an Attorney at Law, a Dan Gleeson 'who was talented and high in his profession' though only 33 years when he died.

Another poignant memorial records the death of a William Bourke, a Merchant of Nenagh who died in the 1840s of 'a malignant fever' when only 36 years of age and left 'a helpless young family'.

Tyone is also the resting place of Tipperary North Riding's first County Manager, John P. Flynn, who died in 1974 aged 76 years.

This volume also includes an inscription from the only gravestone in the former workhouse graveyard which lies behind the Sisters of Mercy Convent in the hospital ground. It also contains inscriptions from tablets and other items in the Church of St John the Baptist.

Where it proved impossible to decipher part of an inscription it is recorded thus: --- Where there is doubt about a date it is recorded thus: ?1890 ?1896, with the more likely date first.
