KILNANEAVE GRAVEYARD

Very little seems to be known about the origins of this large graveyard. It contains small remnants of the ruins of a church, which from the name 'Kilnaneave' was presumably dedicated to all the Saints. According to Gleeson, it was one of the rectories of Tyone Abbey.

Judging from the wide range of dates on the headstones, the graveyard has been in constant use from 1741, which is the date on the oldest headstone, that of one Darby Kennedy, up to the present day.

Another interesting feature is the large number of different families involved. There are about sixty six surnames recorded on the headstones. Amongst them are William Kelly and Brigid Butler, the parents of Denis, Lord Bishop of Ross.

All the stones have been copied. They are in surprisingly good condition, only one or two are broken and difficult to decipher. Where it has proved impossible to read a word it is recorded thus -----
The graveyard is in the modern parish of Templeberry.
